- And how do they serve your bigger picture plans?

YOU DIDN'T INVEST IN TRAINING

Not investing in training can create negative impacts, such as:

- Lowered effectiveness of software/technology
- Reduced return on investment
- Increased project costs
- Resistance to change and sometimes complete software abandonment
- Increase in manual process
- Lowered job satisfaction due to frustration
- Loss of ability to maintain software

COMMON TRAINING MISTAKES...

- Assuming people have foundational skills
- Failing to groom an in-house trainer
- Falsely assuming there won't be staff changes
- Over reliance on face-to-face training

QUICK POLL

Which of these common training mistakes have you or your organisation made when trying to launch a new software system?

- Assuming people have foundational skills
- Failing to groom an in house trainer
- Falsely assuming there won't be staff changes
- Over reliance on face-to-face training

RESULTS

YOU'RE MISSING YOUR CHAMPION

- Designate an implementation lead/team
- Remember that software is only a tool
- Involve your implementation lead/team in the selection of your solution.

YOU'RE LACKING BUY-IN

- You didn't effectively communicate your 'why'
- You didn't anticipate resistance to change

WHERE YOU MIGHT HAVE GONE WRONG...

- You tried to achieve too much, too fast
- You didn't invest in training
- You're missing your champion
- You're lacking buy-in
